THE PEDIGREE OF THE LATE HENRY HAWARDEN-GILLIBRAND-FAZAKERLEY AND THE DESCENT TO HIM OF FAZAKERLEY HALL, GILLIBRAND HALL AND LOWER HOUSE IN WIDNES.

I. FAZAKERLEY OF FAZAKERLEY.

It is not an easy matter to write this family history in war time. I made several extracts from the family papers in 1892 which were then in the possession of the late Mrs. Everard Evered, who was the only surviving daughter of Henry Hawarden-Gillibrand-Fazakerley. They are now the property of her son, Captain Robert Evered, and are stored away in the bank during his absence at the Front. I have marked all the extracts from these papers with an asterisk. I am deeply indebted to the Editor of the Victoria History of Lancashire for his very able summary of the family history which I have consulted down to 1500, and have also made many extracts from the publications of the Chetham Society, and of the Lancashire and Cheshire Record Society. The Catholic Record Society has also been of very great help for the post-Reformation period when the Fazakerleys, Gillibrands and Hawardens adhered to that old Faith which they had inherited from their forefathers. The earlier generations have certainly existed, but their connection in this pedigree is tentative. The early history of the Manor is obscure, but the pedigree which is in Captain Evered's possession gives as the first known ancestor,

- I. RICHARD FAZAKERLEY, Lord of Fazakerley,* Co. Lancaster, in the days of Henry III, c. A.D. 1240, who had issue :—
- II. HENRY DE FAZAKERLEY, his son and heir, who in 1276 recovered possession of half a messuage and 15 acres of land in Walton.¹ He had issue :—
- III. RICHARD DE FAZAKERLEY, was one of the tenants of Richard de Walton in 1292.² He and his son Henry were witnesses to a grant by Richard Lord of Walton to Robert Cawdrau of land in Fazakerley with free entry to moor and wood and other easements.³ He had issue :—
 1. Henry Fazakerley (IV), who follows.
 2. Richard Fazakerley, to whom his brother Henry granted lands adjoining the field of Fazakerley with housebote and heybote and quittance of passage in the wood of Walton.⁴

¹ Assize Rolls 405, m. 3 d. This reference and several others which follow have been taken from the Victoria History of Lancashire, vol. iii.

² Assize Roll 408 m. 61 d. 23.

³ Harl. MSS. 2942, fo. 157.

⁴ Ibid., fo. 154 b.

3. Robert Fazakerley, to whom his brother Henry granted lands in Fazakerley in the Little Ley from the lane to the ditch of the Bancroft with easements in Walton.⁵ He made a grant in the vill of Walton with various easements to which his brother Richard was witness.⁶

IV. HENRY DE FAZAKERLEY, of Fazakerley.* He was living 1 Ed. II (1307), and had issue:—

1. Robert (V), who follows.
2. Richard de Fazakerley, mentioned in deeds of 1323 and 1329 as son of Henry.⁷
3. Henry de Fazakerley.⁸

V. ROBERT DE FAZAKERLEY, of Fazakerley, gave a portion of a meadow to Richard son of John, son of Margery de Fazakerley in 1315.⁹ Lord of Fazakerley 2 Ed. III.* Robert, son of Henry de Fazakerley, was a plaintiff concerning land in Walton in 1352, Simon de Walton being the defendant.¹⁰ He had issue:—

1. Hugh de Fazakerley (V), who follows.

VI. HUGH DE FAZAKERLEY, Lord of Fazakerley, living 49 Ed. III (1375).* In 1356 Hugh son of Robert, son of Henry de Fazakerley, brought a suit against Robert son of William de Walton.¹¹ He accompanied the Duke of Lancaster to Brittany from about 1356 to 1359.¹² He married Isabel, who in 1379, as widow of Hugh de Fazakerley, gave a release of actions to John de Taylor and Henry de Fazakerley, the executors. (Townley MSS. G.C. n. 2491.) She was perhaps the Isabel, widow of John de Toxteth, who in 1419 was bound to Robert and John de Fazakerley (ibid., 2831.) The whole of this period is extremely confusing as there were several collateral branches of the family besides the main stem dwelling in Fazakerley, and they are all quoted side by side in volume iii of the Victoria History of Lancashire. Thus Richard son of Henry, son of Robert de Fazakerley was plaintiff in a case about 1352 (Duchy of Lancaster Assize Rolls, 2 m. iiij). Three years later Robert de Fazakerley was plaintiff in a case in which Richard son of John de Fazakerley was one of the defendants (Duchy of Lancaster Assize Rolls, R. 4, m. 20). Henry, son of Robert, took action against the same defendant in the following year (ibid., R. 5, m. 1), and at the same time another Henry, the son of Richard, was plaintiff against John son of Richard, son of John (R. 5 m., 14 d). In these circumstances one may be forgiven for assuming that the family pedigree was based upon some evidence which we do not possess and that its conclusion that Roger Fazakerley, the next most prominent member of the family, was the son of Hugh is probably correct.

- VII. ROGER FAZAKERLEY, Lord of Fazakerley, is stated to have lived 18 Richard II (1394).^{*} In any case, according to an inquisition taken 8 Richard II (6 March 1385) on the death of Thomas de Lathom,¹³ he married Joan, his second wife and widow, said to have been the second daughter of Hugh Venables, of Kinderton.¹⁴ Letters of protection were granted to both of them by the Duke of Lancaster in 1382.¹⁵ In the same year the Bishop of Lichfield allowed him to have divine service in every oratory within his manors in the diocese.¹⁶ Roger de Fazakerley and Jean his wife received a third part of the manor of Huyton 20 Aug. 1384.¹⁷ His widow Joan married thirdly, Sir Nicholas Haryngton, of Tarleton, and by fine 1397 remitted to Margaret de Lathom and her heirs the moiety of the manor of Huyton.¹⁸ His son:—
- VIII. ROBERT DE FAZAKERLEY, of Fazakerley, married Ellen, daughter of Robert de Walton, who claimed her father's estate from John, Robert's bastard son, and obtained a third part by virtue of a settlement made about 1380 by her father before John's birth.¹⁹ In August 1412, Robert, with a hundred others, came in warlike array to the Manor of Walton and dispossessed John, taking away all his goods and chattels. The dispute was not settled until 1426-7, when a third part was awarded Robert de Fazakerley and Ellen his wife in lieu of her marriage portion.²⁰ They had issue:—
- IX. ROGER FAZAKERLEY DE FAZAKERLEY, is described in 1593 as son and heir of Ellen, daughter of Robert de Walton.²¹ He was living 7 Hen. VI,^{*} and had issue:—
- X. THOMAS FAZAKERLEY, of Fazakerley and Walton, who in 1476 is described as son and heir of the late Roger Fazakerley of West Derby, released to William, son of John Lightwood

II. GILLIBRAND OF CHORLEY.

The Gillibrand family has been settled in Lancashire since the Conquest, if we are to believe an old Latin document quoted in St. George's Visitation of Lancashire:—"Copia extractus veteris Rentalli dat' est 13 die Julii A^o regni Will'i Conquest' quinto, quod propter antiquitatem vix legi potest, in nulla re differens nec aliena ab illo dicto vetere rentali nisi quod possessores et tēta transmutantur Nicholaio Gilibrond de Astleigh in Comit' Lancast' gentleman (sic in MS.) suorumque heredum."⁴¹ The Visitation of 1613 gives the arms of the family as:—Argent, two swords in their scabbards in saltire Sable, hilts Gules, guards Or.

Three principal branches of the family settled in different parts of Lancashire. The ancestors of the Gillibrands of Peel Hall were tenants of Peel under the Abbey of Cokersand as far back as 1286, when John Gillibrand and Margery his wife demanded against Richard, son of Alexander de Astley, the third part of the messuage here as the wife's dower.⁴² In 1292 John, son of John Gilibrand held the estate under the Abbey of Cokersand by the free rent of 2s. yearly.⁴³ The pedigree of this family is given on p. 447 of the third volume of the Victoria History of Lancashire down to 1665, when Ralph Gillibrand of Peel Hall entered his pedigree back to his great-great-grandfather, Nicholas Gillibrand.

Notes on the Gillibrands of Rams Grove will be found in Abram's History of Blackburn, pp. 629-630; their pedigree was entered in the Visitation of 1665 by Jonathan Gillibrand, Vicar of Leigh; back to his grandfather Thomas Gillibrand of Rams Grove in 1610.

The earliest mention of the Gillibrands of Chorley occurs about 1430, when Humphrey Gillibrand was holding a small portion of the Hospitalers' land by the rent of 4d. He married Elizabeth . . . and died about 1441, leaving issue, a son, John. In this year Eaveshey was divided between Humphrey Gillibrand, Richard Crosse and William Woodward, John the son and heir of Humphrey Gillibrand assenting.⁴⁴ An additional agreement was made in 1441 between Richard Crosse on the one side and Elizabeth, widow of Humphrey Gillibrand, and John her son on the other, by which the former took the north part of this land and the latter the south.⁴⁵

- I. JOHN GILLIBRAND, who was probably the grandson of John Gillibrand, the son of Humphrey, is described as of Chorley Hall, aged 55, 28 April, 30 Hen. VIII (Lancashire and Cheshire Record Society, vol. xxxv, p. 94).⁴⁶ He was the holder of a third of Eveshey, together with Henry Breres, 4d., Alexander Street, 4d., and James Crosse, 4d.⁴⁷ His son:—
 - II. THOMAS GILLIBRAND, of Chorley Hall,⁴⁸ married Agnes, daughter of William Fleetwood, of Heskin, by Helen, daughter of Gilbert Standish, and had issue:—⁴⁶
 1. John (III), who follows.
 1. Elizabeth, who married Laurence Breres, of Walton Hall, son of Roger Breres, of Walton-juxta-Liverpool, by Blanch, daughter and coheir of Richard Crosse, of Liverpool and Crosse Hall, by Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Roger Walton, Lord of Walton. (J.G.)
 - III. JOHN GILLIBRAND, of Chorley, married Jane, daughter of Richard Urmston, of Westleigh, co. Lancaster.^{46 48} His widow was paying her fines for recusancy, 20 Jac. I (1621-2 and 1628), (J.G.) They had issue:—

 - IV. THOMAS GILLIBRAND, of Chorley Hall, aged 31 in 1613,⁴⁶ married Anne, daughter of William Blundell, of Crosby Hall, by Emilia, daughter of Edward Norreys, of Speke Hall. Both he and his wife were convicted Recusants,⁵⁰ and he was one of the more considerable landowners in 1628. In 1631 he was called upon to pay £10 for having refused knighthood.⁵¹ Some interesting details are afforded by the narrative of two of his daughters who became nuns at Louvain in 1643. "Their mother, Anne Blundell, of Crosby, was brought up a good Catholic, but her husband was not. When he sued her for marriage she told him plainly that he would never have to look to her unless he would become a Catholic. He then, God's grace concurring, being perhaps well minded before, became a Catholic, and as they were married by a priest he continued ever afterwards a most good and constant Catholic. At the Convent, on his daughters' profession, he promised to give £400 apiece, but had difficulty in doing so, for after this it happened that their parents were extremely plundered, as others of that same miserable time of war in England, and were fain to leave their house which was taken from them, as also they lost their estate and Mr. Gillibrand was forced to fly into Wales. There he lived in poverty, yet content to suffer for God. Their mother went and lived with her daughter who was then newly married, also in poverty, but with content to suffer for her conscience, being a Catholic."⁵² Their estates were sequestrated and ultimately forfeited during the Commonwealth period.⁵³ His will was dated 10th April, proved at Leyland 15 Aug. 1667.⁵⁴ They had issue:—

1. John (V), who follows.
2. William, died unmarried.
3. Thomas, died in infancy. (J.G.)

III. THE FAMILY OF HAWARDEN OF WIDNES.

The Lancashire family of Hawarden was represented in the seventeenth century by two main branches. The Hawardens of Woolston were, according to Flower, a branch of the Hawardens of Hawarden, co. Flint, but Mr. Gillow, in his historical introduction to the Catholic registers commenced in the hall at Woolston (C.R.S., vol. xvii, 479-507), points out that it is almost certain from the armorial quarterings that the family derived from the de Ardernes of Harden or Hawarden Hall, co. Chester, a baronial and picturesque erection now in ruins. In 1401 Hugh de Wolston was in possession of the Manor of Woolston.⁶⁵ Through the marriage of his daughter Annabel (or Elizabeth) to John de Arderne, son of John de Arderne, of Hawarden, co. Chester, by his marriage with Amery, daughter and heiress of John Legh, of High Legh,⁶⁶ the manor of Woolston passed to the Hawardens. In 1432, John Hawarden & Elizabeth his wife were freeholders in Poulton and Woolston.⁶⁷ This family is extinct since the death of Adam Hawarden, of Woolston, 6 Feb. 1596-7, his only son having predeceased him.⁶⁸ Elizabeth, his daughter, married (settlement dated August 20 1574) Alexander, son and heir of Edward Standish, of Standish, by Helen, daughter of Sir William Radcliffe, of Ordsall.⁶⁹ The manor subsequently descended with Standish until March 1870, when the Hall was sold to the present owner, Mr. John Bennett, by the Standish trustees, with the consent of the late Charles Henry Lionel Widdrington Standish.⁷⁰ The Hawardens of Widnes are said to be a branch of the Hawardens of Woolston.⁷¹ It should, however, be noted that a William de Hawarden was settled at Widnes as early as 1332.⁷²
